EPF BENEFICIARY

EPF will only refer to latest form in claims

THE Employees Provident Fund (EPF) refers to the letter by D. Ramachandaran (NST, June 25) regarding the printing of members' beneficiary(ies) on the EPF annual statement.

This is already being done. Beginning January last year, EPF members can opt to have the name of their beneficiary(ies) printed on their annual statement, which is sent by EPF once a year.

However, the nomination details will always be treated as private and confidential, and EPF is not allowed to reveal it without permission from members.

To have the beneficiary(ies) stated in the annual statement, members with an existing nomination would need to fill up the Borang KWSP 4C. As for new nominations, members must fill up Borang KWSP 4 and hand it in personally to any EPF offices.

Alternatively, members can also check their nomination details via i-Akaun at the EPF website (www.kwsp.gov.my).

Nominating a beneficiary is very important and every member must ensure that they do their nominations accordingly.

On the writer's suggestion to use the annual statement as first document of reference in claims and legal procedure, we would like to highlight that EPF will always refer to the original copy of the latest nomination form to confirm the details of the beneficiary(ies) before approving a death withdrawal application. The annual statement only serves as a document of reference for members.

We would like to thank the writer for his suggestions and we continue to welcome feedback from members.
